Note:

This work is the companion piece of Magnasco's painting The Organist and his Students (Lost Art ID: 478475).

In his 1949 monograph on Magnasco, the scholar Benno Geiger notes that the collection Chamberlayne was invented, suggesting that the provenance referred to in the exhibition catalogue of Galerie Sambon and on verso is in fact false.

Moreover, Geiger notes that this painting, together with its pair, The Magic Lantern, was sold after 1935 to a German collector through the Parisian dealer Carlo Levi-Broglio. Based on Hildebrand Gurlitt's extant correspondence, it is evident that both Hildebrand Gurlitt and Gitta Gurlitt knew Broglio and frequently visited him in Paris. Hypothetically, this may suggest that Gurlitt was possibly said German collector, referred to by Geiger.
